

Computer and Information Technology

The program provides students an introduction to information systems, computer applications, program development, system maintenance, and networking including the Internet. In addition to core courses, students select specialty courses in software application, computer science, internet technologies, network technologies, or programming.

Bluegrass Occupational Outlook

| Career | Average Wage (2010) |
|--|---------------------|
| Computer support specialist | $19.31 |
| #50 among Top 50 Fastest Growing Bluegrass Occupations | |

Degree Offered

The following degree is offered for this program online and at the Newtown campus:

Associate in Applied Science (A.A.S.)

bluegrass.kctcs.edu

