

Environmental Science Technology

The program includes specialized environmental science courses that provide the background necessary for a career that protects and enhances natural resources and human health. Practical lab and field experience allows students to apply instructional knowledge to the surveillance and analysis of environmental resources and sources of pollution in accordance with state and federal regulations.

Bluegrass Occupational Outlook

Career	Average Wage (2010)
Environmental engineering technician	$22.02
Environmental science and protection technician	$19.96

Degree Offered

The following degree is offered for this program at the Cooper Campus:
Associate in Applied Science (A.A.S.)

bluegrass.kctcs.edu

